

FOUR OHIO DEATHS CAUSED BY COLD WAVE; MERCURY TO FALL

More Rain or Snow Followed by Dropping Temperature Expected.

FOUR EVADE LAKE

Man Slips Into Path of Big Truck.

With at least four deaths attributed directly or indirectly to the cold wave in the state, Ohio was warned today that another frigid blast probably will blow in tonight. Additional rain or snow followed by dropping temperatures were predicted by weather forecasters. Traffic conditions throughout the state today were reported as treacherous. A brief rain fell yesterday in central Ohio, glazing Saturday.

NO ACCIDENTS HERE

Despite the fact that highways and streets of Pickaway and Circleville were extremely slippery over the week-end, no serious accidents were reported. Several cars were known to have slipped off the highways but, according to a survey made Monday, no one was injured.

Friday's heavy snow with a covering of ice. Numerous automobile accidents were reported. Two smash-ups resulted in fatalities. On one of the treacherous roads, John F. Weismantle, 21, of Defiance, was killed when his automobile skidded and plunged into a ditch near Haviland.

SLIPS ON ROAD
George W. Flegley, 45, of McKeesport, Pa., died in Mt. Carmel Hospital at Columbus from injuries received when he slipped on an icy road in the path of an oncoming truck.

Cecil Dunn, 46, of Point Pleasant, Va., was drowned near Gallipolis when he lost his footing and slipped off the icy deck of the ship, Tuendie, into the Ohio river.

Another indirect victim of the cold wave was Mrs. Anna Steffan, who died in a Columbus hospital from burns received when she stoked up a fire in her home during the preparation of a meal.

Fears of another tragedy were abated today when a party of four coastguardsmen, who had protected the body of a hunter for two days on lonely West Sister Island, came ashore from Lake Erie. It had been believed that all were drowned when they went to search for Frank Ryan, 50, of Uniontown, O., who was accidentally shot while hunting.

Cold weather following a slight thaw will make traffic conditions even more hazardous, state highway department officials said. In several Ohio cities, unemployed men were to be put to work clearing the streets of snow and ice.

PLANES GROUNDED
Airplanes were grounded over the week-end at both Columbus and Cincinnati.

A companion of the first touch of winter was the year's first flying accident, which brought a fractured shoulder and scalp lacerations to William Mallory, 9, of Lancaster. His sled, which was hooked to the rear of a car, swung out in front of the car when the auto turned, and the boy was run over.

Five automobiles figured in wrecks over a small stretch of road near New Philadelphia.

Seek To Smash Suspect's Alibi

Two Aviators Held as Material Witnesses In Wanderwell Mystery.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Dec. 12.—Detectives moved swiftly today in efforts to break down the alibi of William J. "Curley" Guy, held in connection with the murder of Capt. Walter Wanderwell, world famed aviator and soldier of fortune.

The officers held Edward Delarm, Indian aviator, and his assistant, Ralph Dunlap, as material witnesses.

Delarm had declared that Guy was at the Delarm home in Glendale, Cal., at 9 o'clock last Monday night—the hour when Wanderwell, the "man with 1,000 enemies," was shot to death in a darkened cabin on his yacht, the Carma, in Long Beach harbor, 30 miles from Glendale.

At an all day grilling several mystery witnesses confronted Delarm. His daughter, Juanita, and two other persons were said by police to have told conflicting stories about Guy's presence in the Delarm home the night of the murder. Delarm admitted, police said, it would have been possible for Guy to have driven to Long Beach that night without knowledge of Mr. and Mrs. Delarm.

Ben Haddox, Arrested Sunday Night, Had Waded Deer-creek To Escape.

With the arrest of Ben Haddox, of Williamsport, the local sheriff's office has broken up a gang of alleged thieves who have been operating in the vicinity of Williamsport for the past six months.

"Gilly" Williams, Hoyt Tharp, Ralph Tharp and Haddox, all of Williamsport, are alleged to have been guilty of breaking and entering the home of Charles Arledge, of Deer-creek-twp., and taking potatoes, gasoline and guns.

At the time of Williams' arrest by Sheriff Radcliff last week Haddox, who was with Williams, escaped the officers by wading across Deer-creek and eluding the officers until Sunday night when he was arrested by Deputies Armstrong and Boggs at his home near Woodlyn.

Hearing for the four alleged burglars were to be held some time Monday.

CAP' HOOVER FACES CHARGE

Mrs. L. C. Chamberlain Charges Ashville Man With Sodomy; Bound to Jury

Another chapter has been written in the alleged "blackmail" case of Francis "Cappy" Hoover, and Lanson C. and Howard Chamberlain and Chester Maupin, all of Ashville.

Hoover was arrested the latter part of last week by Oscar Woebber, constable working out of Squire E. C. Friece's court here, on an affidavit charging sodomy sworn out by Mrs. L. C. Chamberlain. Hoover, a brother of former Sheriff Lewis Hoover, provided $1,000 bond and was bound over to the grand jury after a plea of not guilty.

Mrs. Chamberlain had sworn out an affidavit early last week and presented it to Squire J. S. Hoover of Harrison-twp., but when Hoover resigned his position she had another affidavit drawn which she filed in Friece's court.

Action in this case which is expected to be hotly fought after the first of the year was started several weeks ago by Hoover who filed charges of blackmail against the Chamberlains and Maupin claiming that they wrote notes to him demanding money which he gave them. Young Chamberlain and Maupin were arrested but it was necessary for Deputy Sheriff Bryan Custer to trace the elder Chamberlain over the southwest before having him arrested.

The Chamberlains are represented by Max C. Seyfert Jr., and Maupin by Paul E. Adkins. Hoover was not represented in Friece's court.

Modern Woodmen of America will hold their annual election of officers in the Woodmen Hall over the first National bank Tuesday night. All Woodmen are urged to attend.

county championship was presented young Spangler by Prof. Buchanan.

Following is the text of the winner's address:
"We are met here to discuss peace. I submit one inquiry which probes a fundamental cause of war. What are we going to do about the professional militarists and their industrial colleagues who promote war for profit—who know no honor but medals, no gods but greed?"

"Let me illustrate: Germany before the war was arrogantly militaristic. She attempted to develop a navy to dominate the whole of Europe. This gigantic big-navy policy was created in a little office by one man, Captain Alfred von Tirpitz. He sold his idea to the Kaiser and tried to interest big business. He failed until suddenly he hit upon the splendid idea that 'the navy pays,' that 'sea armaments spell more cash to industry,' that 'with a battleship in one hand and demands for raw materials or with high priced goods in the other, industry can exploit the weak of the world.' Soon we hear no longer of Captain von Tirpitz but of Admiral von Tirpitz, head of the big German navy, with a new gold braid over his left shoulder, and a big decoration on his chest.

GERMANY NOT ALONE

"But Germany is not the only offender. What about the United States? In his latest book 'THE NAVY,' Charles A. Beard shows how a small group of industrialists and militarists are striving to make us arrogantly navalistic. We are told on the one hand, 'Build a large navy to protect our merchant-marine,' while on the other: 'build a large merchant-marine to protect our navy.' But regardless of all else, they say, 'Build enough ships to be able to defeat any nation or any combination of nations in any waters on the face of the earth.' Now, if we are entitled to such a display of power, then England, France, Russia, Japan will be aroused to it also. 'Round and round the

LOCAL MAN IS MAJOR

Entitled To All Privileges Thereof.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 12.—William B. Cady, 215 S. Scioto-st., Circleville, Ohio, who was boosted from an enlisted man to a major when officers were in demand during the World War, only to have his shoulder leaf and Sam Browne belt taken away from him and a sergeant's stripes substituted when the war was over, is a major again today.

Cady's advancement to his old rank was announced by the war department under the terms of an act passed by Congress last May, directing that all enlisted men who served as emergency officers should be given the highest rank which they held during the war.

Cady retired from the army with the rank of master sergeant. His appointment as a major is retroactive to May 7, 1932. Under the terms of the act he receives no increase in retired pay, but is entitled to all the other benefits and privileges of his rank.

T. GILMORE, 64, ANSWERS CALL

Attache of State Official Circles Dies; Was Ross-Co Clerk of Courts.

A familiar figure in Ohio supreme court circles for the past six years, Tiffin Gilmore, aged 64, deputy marshal of the court, passed away early Sunday at his home in Columbus of a heart attack suffered last week.

Before being named deputy marshal of the court, Mr. Gilmore, a grand nephew of Edward Tiffin, Ohio's first governor, had been stationer and editor of Ohio laws in the office of former Secretary of State Thad H. Brown, had served two years in the fish and game department of the state and 10 years in the U. S. department of internal revenue.

FRIEND OF JUDGE
Mr. Gilmore was a personal friend of Judge Joseph W. Adkins of common pleas court. He lived a greater part of his life in Chillicothe and was twice elected clerk of courts of Ross-co on the Republican ticket. He was also a postal employee of that city. His father, Col. William E. Gilmore, was postmaster of Chillicothe for a number of years.

The deceased was a captain and regimental adjutant of the Seventh O. V. I. and a leader in the United States Spanish War veterans' activities.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the residence, 85 W. Third-ave., Columbus, with interment in Greenlawn cemetery.

WOMEN URGE CONGRESS TO RETAIN LAWS

Drys Open Testimony Against Collier Beer and Wine Measure.

MILLIONS BANDED

Mrs. Peabody Leads Offensive Today.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The fight for beer is only an "entering wedge" for the wines of France, Mrs. F. O. Johnson of Delaware, O. representing the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement of Ohio, told the House Ways and Means committee today.

Appearing as a witness against the Collier beer and light wines bill, Mrs. Johnson declared, "Europe got America into the mess of the World War and now wishes to dictate the liquor solutions of this country. Let Europe keep its hands off this matter."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Two million women are banded together to fight for retention of prohibition, the House Ways and Means committee was told today as drys opened their testimony against the Collier beer and light wines bill. Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of New York, chairman of the Woman's National committee for law enforcement, marshalled a half-dozen witnesses to counteract the testimony of brewers, vintners and others.

Proposed modification of the Volstead act was assailed as a "negotiation of the constitution" which will make the depression worse instead of providing a cure.

RAPS CONVENTIONS
The Republican and Democratic national conventions were indirectly assailed by Mrs. Peabody as "mob conventions" which had no power to give Congress a mandate to destroy prohibition.

Describing her organization as a clearing house for militant dry women, Mrs. Peabody said half of 20,000,000 protestant women are banded together in prohibition bodies.

Mrs. Peabody sprang into the public eye a few years ago when she moved from Boston to Florida because the Bay State voted wet.

DEFENDS VOLSTEAD
She assailed either 2.75 or 3.2 per cent beer, and defending the Volstead definition of intoxicating liquor as anything containing over one-half of one per cent alcohol, she said:

"This content was established by the brewers themselves in 1862 in their defense against the soft drink table. Let this decision stand. We have no financial or political interest. We are not here to lobby for any trade or party. Nor have we ever received funds from wet organizations or politicians. We have only one desire - - - to protect the constitution."

county championship was presented young Spangler by Prof. Buchanan. Following is the text of the winner's address:

"We are met here to discuss peace, I submit one inquiry which probes a fundamental cause of war. What are we going to do about the professional militarists and their industrial colleagues who promote war for profit—who know no honor but medals, no gods but greed?"

"Let me illustrate: Germany before the war was arrogantly militaristic. She attempted to develop a navy to dominate the whole of Europe. This gigantic big-navy policy was created in a little office by one man, Captain Alfred von Tirpitz. He sold his idea to the Kaiser and tried to interest big business. He failed until suddenly he hit upon the splendid idea that 'the navy pays,' that 'sea armaments spell more cash to industry,' that 'with a battleship in one hand and demands for raw materials or with high priced goods in the other industry can exploit the weak of the world.' Soon we hear no longer of Captain von Tirpitz, head of the big German navy, with a new gold braid over his left shoulder, and a big decoration on his chest."

GERMANY NOT ALONE

"But Germany is not the only offender. What about the United States? In his latest book 'THE NAVY,' Charles A. Beard shows how a small group of industrialists and militarists are striving to make us arrogantly navalistic. We are told on the one hand, 'Build a large navy to protect our merchant-marine,' while on the other: 'build a large merchant-marine to protect our navy.' But regardless of all else, they say, 'Build enough ships to be able to defeat any nation or any combination of nations in any waters on the face of the earth.' Now, if we are entitled to such a display of power, then England, France, Russia, Japan will be aroused to it also. 'Round and round the

All Enlisted Men Returned To Highest Post They Held During War.

LOCAL MAN IS MAJOR

Entitled To All Privileges Thereof.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 12.—William B. Cady, 215 S. Scioto-st., Circleville, Ohio, who was boosted from an enlisted man to a major when officers were in demand during the World War, only to have his shoulder leaf and Sam Browne belt taken away from him and a sergeant's stripes substituted when the war was over, is a major again today.

Cady's advancement to his old rank was announced by the war department under the terms of an act passed by Congress last May, directing that all enlisted men who served as emergency officers should be given the highest rank which they held during the war. Cady retired from the army with the rank of master sergeant. His appointment as a major is retroactive to May 7, 1932. Under the terms of the act he receives no increase in retired pay, but is entitled to all the other benefits and privileges of his rank.

T. GILMORE, 64, ANSWERS CALL

Attache of State Official Circles Dies; Was Ross-Co Clerk of Courts.

A familiar figure in Ohio supreme court circles for the past six years, Tiffin Gilmore, aged 64, deputy marshal of the court, passed away early Sunday at his home in Columbus of a heart attack suffered last week.

Before being named deputy marshal of the court, Mr. Gilmore, a grand nephew of Edward Tiffin, Ohio's first governor, had been statistician and editor of Ohio laws in the office of former Secretary of State Thad H. Brown, had served two years in the fish and game department of the state and 10 years in the U. S. department of internal revenue.

FRIEND OF JUDGE

Mr. Gilmore was a personal friend of Judge Joseph W. Adkins of common pleas court. He lived a greater part of his life in Chillicothe and was twice elected clerk of courts of Ross-co on the Republican ticket. He was also a postal employee of that city. His father, Col. William E. Gilmore, was postmaster of Chillicothe for a number of years.

The deceased was a captain and regimental adjutant of the Seventh O. V. I. and a leader in the United States Spanish War veterans' activities.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the residence, 85 W. Third-ave, Columbus, with interment in Green-lawn cemetery.

JUDGE CLEVINGER TO HEAR DIVORCE

Judge Frank M. Clevenger, of Wilmington, will hear the contested divorce case of Ida Beavers Roof against Charles E. Roof in common pleas court Thursday, it has been announced.

Judge Clevenger was assigned to hear the proceedings when Judge Joseph W. Adkins asked that a foreign judge be named because George G. Adkins, the defendant's attorney, is his brother.

Barton Walters represents Mrs. Roof who charges gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty.

The equity case of Dennison against Dennison which was scheduled in the court of common pleas for Dec. 9 has been continued to Dec. 22.

Barton Walters and C. A. Leist are attorneys for the plaintiff and C. A. Weldon represents the defendant.

WOMEN URGE CONGRESS TO RETAIN LAWS

Drys Open Testimony Against Collier Beer and Wine Measure.

MILLIONS BANDED

Mrs. Peabody Leads Offensive Today.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The fight for beer is only on "entering wedge" for the wines of France, Mrs. F. O. Johnson of Delaware, O. representing the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement of Ohio, told the House Ways and Means committee today.

Appearing as a witness against the Collier beer and light wines bill, Mrs. Johnson declared, "Europe got America into the mess of the World War and now wishes to dictate the liquor solutions of this country. Let Europe keep its hands off this matter."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Ten million women are banded together to fight for retention of prohibition, the House Ways and Means committee was told today as dries opened their testimony against the Collier beer and light wines bill.

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of New York, chairman of the Woman's National committee for law enforcement, marshalled a half-dozen witnesses to counteract the testimony of brewers, vintners and others.

Proposed modification of the Volstead act was assailed as nullification of the constitution which will make the depression worse instead of providing a cure.

RAPS CONVENTIONS

The Republican and Democratic national conventions were indirectly assailed by Mrs. Peabody as "mob conventions" which had no power to give Congress a mandate to destroy prohibition.

Describing her organization as a clearing house for militant dry women, Mrs. Peabody said half of 20,000,000 protestant women are banded together in prohibition bodies.

Mrs. Peabody sprang into the public eye a few years ago when she moved from Boston to Florida because the Bay State voted wet.

DEFENDS VOLSTEAD She assailed either 2.75 or 3.2 per cent beer, and defending the Volstead definition of intoxicating liquor as anything containing over one-half of one per cent alcohol, she said:

"This content was established by the brewers themselves in 1862 in their defense against the soft drink table. Let this decision stand. We have no financial or political interest. We are not here to lobby for any trade or party. Nor have we ever received funds from wet organizations or politicians. We have only one desire - - - to protect the constitution."

Trojans Again Nearing National Grid Honors

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 12.—With Notre Dame beaten, 13-0, the University of Southern California, claiming the 1932 national gridiron title, prepared to start practice tomorrow for the annual Pasadena Rose Bowl game with Pittsburgh university Jan. 2.

Practicing the Trojans, the Notre Dame football team left Los Angeles last night for South Bend, Ind.

Coach "Hunk" Anderson of Notre Dame and his players were in good spirits, convinced that they played their best against the Trojans before 101,000 persons, the largest crowd to see a football game in the United States this season.

None of the Ramblers was seriously injured, and members of the Trojan team who were injured were recovering satisfactory today and all were expected to be in first class condition for the game with the Pittsburgh eleven.

WON 19TH GAME
Southern California kept its 1932 unbeaten, untied record clean against the Ramblers, and hoped to attain the twentieth victory over the Panthers.

Coach Anderson, whose team was beaten 12 to 0 by Pittsburgh, expressed belief that the Trojans would win from the Panthers in the New Year's game. He contended that the strong Trojan line would be more than too much for the fleet Panther backs. Coach Howard Jones was non-committal. He regards Pittsburgh as a powerful team.

Jess Harper, director of athletics at Notre Dame, spent the day in conference with representatives of the University of California relative to a "home-and-home" series of games, the first to be played in Berkeley in 1933. No definite announcement, however, was forthcoming.

OTHER TEAMS PLAY

Aside from the Trojan-Pittsburgh game, coast teams will participate in three other inter-sectional games. Georgia Tech is rolling westward to play the University of California, while Oregon is enroute to Baton Rouge to play Louisiana State university, and the University of California at Los Angeles eleven was enroute to Gainesville to play the University of Florida.

Pittsburg Only Team In Way of Southern California Eleven.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—Sport squads at Ohio State University are on a modified practice schedule at Ohio State University to permit athletes to prepare for final examinations which occur next week.

The basketball team which has its next game on Dec. 28 when Notre Dame comes to Columbus, will continue brief practice sessions this week and then lay off until after Christmas. In wrestling, the 25 men on the varsity squad will keep in condition by occasional workouts but regular squad practice and inter-squad bouts will not begin until the first of the year.

Gymnastics may prove to be the exception in the matter of regular workouts since the small squad in this highly specialized sport cannot afford an extended let-down. A three man team is the rule in Western Conference competition, and Coach Leo Staley is concentrating his efforts on a few individuals. George Sting and Ralph Stone, are available from last year's team as well as Kenneth Müssman, former varsity cheer leader. All are from Columbus.

Because of the long practice and the equipment necessary to carry on the gymnastic events, the sport does not adapt itself to the inter-tramural footing on which several other sports at Ohio State now find themselves. Buckeye gymnasts are expected to enter the Western Conference meet and various amateur meets throughout Ohio during the winter.

In addition to the Notre Dame basketball game, there is a possibility that the Ohio State swimming team and the polo squad will see action during the Christmas holidays. Swimmers plan a trip to several Ohio cities, meeting local Y. M. C. A. and amateur tank teams, and the polo team may take advantage of the holidays to schedule a match or two.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

MARK New Holland's basketball team as one of the toughest in the south central Ohio district then lay your jack that the west - county boys are going places in a big way this year.

Led by Gene Briggs, we'll say the best high school basketball player in Pickaway-co, the New Hollanders did nothing less than to Washington C. H. Friday evening to defeat a veteran Fayetteco seat team, 20 to 19. Briggs scored 14 of the points while Joe Louis, diminutive but classy guard, scored the other six.

Advices from Washington C. H. are that the New Hollanders presented one of the snappiest teams to show in that city for a long while. The game was nip and tuck with neither team holding much of an advantage but with Washington C. H. ahead in the final two minutes Briggs hooped in a shot from near the foul circle to tie the count, then with the outcome of the game dependent upon his shot, he nonchalantly tossed a free throw through the hoop to win the ball game.

EVERY BOY ON THE NEW HOLLAND TEAM DID WELL, INCLUDING HICKLE AT THE OTHER FORWARD, DAVIS AT CENTER AND JENNINGS AND VINCENT WHO ALTERNATED AT THE OTHER GUARD.

PORTSMOUTH'S SPARTANS

and Chicago Bears will play in Chicago next Sunday for the National Professional championship.

The Bears won a tie Sunday by defeating the Green Bay Packers, 9-0 in a snow-storm.

A field goal by Tine Engbreton and a touchdown after a 68-yard run proved the margin of victory.

Whether or not Dutch Clark will be with Portsmouth is not certain because he has returned to Colorado college where he coaches basketball.

Hunk Anderson, Notre Dame coach, says he would take Ernie Smith, Southern Cal. tackle, over his great tackles Kurtz and Krause.

Incidentally Smith was the man who almost lone-handedly stopped the Irish running attack Saturday.

His team won 13-0.

Ohio Wesleyan's basketball victory over Ohio State, 40-38, came as a distinct surprise after the Buckeyes defeating Toledo 61-something last week.

Delaware lost by 33-22 to Columbus North.

Miami defeated Wilmington college, 31-23.

Circleville plays Pickaway-twp here Friday evening, Bexley and Bellefontaine meet, Grandview tangles with Columbus West, Lancaster St. Mary's and Ostrander play a natural at Lancaster and London and Marysville clash.

JURY RECOMMENDS

GRiffin, Ga.—Switching its attention from consideration of crime, the Spalding County grand jury recommended a five-year tax holiday for persons who buy, reside on and operate farms in this district.

ESTELL IS HOPE OF BASEBALL 9 AT OHIO STATE

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—Although baseball at Ohio State University is to be considerably curtailed next Spring, candidates for the varsity team will report for winter practice immediately after the Christmas holidays, Coach Wayne Wright said today.

The winter months, Wright said, will be devoted to the development of pitching candidates and catchers.

Among the most likely looking prospects for the pitching staff, it was indicated, is a young sophomore named Ansel Estell of Pickaway-twp, near Circleville. He is a left-hander and is expected to win a berth on the varsity.

Three men were lost by graduation from last Spring's pitching staff. They were Lowell Wrigley of Lima, Jock Coudon of Hamilton and M. W. Alvord of Montville.

OHIO STATE GRADS TO HOLD MEETINGS ON DECEMBER 28TH

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—Ohio State University alumni in all parts of the world will observe "Ohio State Day" on Dec. 28, John B. Fullen, alumni secretary, announced.

The event has been changed from early December to the Christmas holidays this year, that students and their parents may join in the programs. "Ohio State Day" has been held annually since 1911. Simultaneous meetings were held last year in 50 Ohio counties and in 30 cities outside the state. Meetings were also reported from Paris, the Philippine Islands, and South Africa.

BROADCAST PROGRAM

Starting at 8 p. m. a one-hour program will be broadcast from WEAO, the university station, on Dec. 28, for the benefit of the alumni groups. President G. W. Rightmire, of Ohio State, will speak on "The Responsibility of University Alumni to Public Education." A musical program will also be presented.

Fullen expects that this year's observance will be more general than ever before, efforts being made to have at least one local meeting in each of Ohio's 88 counties, as well as in numerous cities outside the state. Speakers from the campus will address many of these local groups.

Congress never will balance the budget until it learns to budget the balance.

little ball goes; where it stops nobody knows."

But who is behind this American big-navy idea? THE NAVY LEAGUE OF AMERICA. And what is the Navy League of America? Well, its founders include one corporation of eighteen private individuals, among which were the Midvale Steel Co. which received millions of dollars of orders for armorplate alone from the government during the war; Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, J. P. Morgan of the U. S. Steel Corporation. "Strange coincidence," Tavenner pointed out, "that among those nineteen patriots who stepped forth from among the millions of American citizens to save the country by advocating larger appropriations for battleships, every armor-making concern in the United States should be represented."

Hired Shearer

"This League employed a man by the name of Shearer to spread its propaganda for a bigger and better navy. I don't know whether they chose him for his name or not," Shearer, shearer of the lamb of peace, and having shorn the military industrialists for thirty pieces of silver, on second thought it was not thirty pieces of silver at all. Perhaps I slander Judas by saying so, for in 1927 Shearer received $25,000 from these interests to break up the Geneva Arms Conference which threatened to reduce naval forces. And that, ladies and gentlemen, is not merely newspaper gossip but actual evidence wormed out of Shearer himself. Then having performed this patriotic service he came home and went down to Washington. To do what? I quote his own words: "to post the new commander" of the American Legion upon how he should use his influence among the World War veterans in order to promote the big navy gospel. And who was that commander of the American Legion? Ladies and gentlemen, it was Colonel Paul D. McNutt, dean of the Indiana University Indiana. Let me quote from Shearer's own testimony concerning his relations with him:

"I came down to Washington," said Shearer, "and I entered Commander McNutt's apartment and was with him until three in the morning, educating him, we will say, or posting him or whatever you wish. The next night Commander McNutt made a famous speech. I had given him all the data that I thought was necessary to carry on the policy of the American Legion."

"Ladies and gentlemen, I beg you to believe that I do not mean to criticize Colonel McNutt, but merely to point out how even so

DEPENDS ON YOUTH

"And so we, the youth, should deliver our ultimatum—speaking, writing, lifting our voices wherever we are in behalf of peace. We should demand that the educational systems of the world be recast so that the new generations, dig the musket, handed to him perching down deep into the high schools and the grade schools too magnanimously by some one where the great masses of our people receive their education today, will be taught the true facts of history, the warped causes of war, and at least a little human understanding of the peoples and the problems of the world. We should deliver our ultimatum warning the older generations that "we have lost interest in being prepared for cannon fodder." We should deliver warning, that if the militarist and the industrialists are to dictate the policies of our government, we will have NOTHING to do with war.

Last week saw the Tigers take a reversal at the hand of Dallas Williams' Grocer five and while they didn't make such a good showing against the Grocers they are liable to start fireworks in Tuesday night's fray.

The last game on the bill will bring together Williams' Grocer's and Commercial Point A. C. These teams know each others tactics pretty well and should make it a real battle for the supremacy in Commercial Points cage teams.

In the Battle for Beer

Here is an interesting picture from the beer front at Washington where the House Ways and Means Committee is conducting a series of hearings with a view to legalizing 3.2 per cent beer. Professor Yandell Harrison, physiologist at Yale University, is shown as he testified before the solons that 4 per cent beer is non-alcoholic and should be classified as a temperance drink. The professor said that light beer is no more intoxicating than coffee.

ESTELL IS HOPE OF BASEBALL 9 AT OHIO STATE

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—Although baseball at Ohio State University is to be considerably curtailed next Spring, candidates for the varsity team will report for winter practice immediately after the Christmas holidays, Coach Wayne Wright said today.

The winter months, Wright said, will be devoted to the development of pitching candidates and catchers.

Among the most likely looking prospects for the pitching staff, it was indicated, is a young sophomore named Ansel Estell of Pickaway-twp, near Circleville. He is a left-hander and is expected to win a berth on the varsity.

Three men were lost by graduation from last Spring's pitching staff. They were Lowell Wrigley of Lima, Jock Condon of Hamilton and M. W. Alvord of Montville.

OHIO STATE GRADS TO HOLD MEETINGS ON DECEMBER 28TH

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—Ohio State University alumni in all parts of the world will observe "Ohio State Day" on Dec. 28, John E. Fullen, alumni secretary, announces.

The event has been changed from early December to the Christmas holidays this year, that students and their parents may join in the programs. "Ohio State Day" has been held annually since 1911. Simultaneous meetings were held last year in 50 Ohio counties and in 30 cities outside the state. Meetings were also reported from Paris, the Philippine Islands, and South Africa.

BROADCAST PROGRAM

Starting at 8 p. m. a one-hour program will be broadcast from WBAO, the university station, on Dec. 28, for the benefit of the alumni groups. President G. W. Rightmire, of Ohio State, will speak on "The Responsibility of University Alumni to Public Education." A musical program will also be presented.

Fullen expects that this year's observance will be more general than ever before, efforts being made to have at least one local meeting in each of Ohio's 88 counties, as well as in numerous cities outside the state. Speakers from the campus will address many of these local groups.

Congress never will balance the budget until it learns to budget the balance.

little ball goes; where it stops nobody knows."

But who is behind this American big-navy idea? THE NAVY LEAGUE OF AMERICA. And what is the Navy League of America? Well, its founders include one corporation of eighteen private individuals, among which were the Midvale Steel Co., which received millions of dollars of orders for armorplate alone from the government during the war; Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, J. P. Morgan of the U. S. Steel Corporation. "Strange coincidence," as Tavenner pointed out, "that among those nineteen patriots who stepped forth from among the millions of American citizens to save the country by advocating larger appropriations for battle-ships, every armor-making concern in the United States should be represented."

HIRED SHEARER

"This League employed a man by the name of Shearer to spread its propaganda for a bigger and better navy. I don't know whether they chose him for his name or not! Shearer, shearer of the lamb of peace. And having shorn the lamb he sold the wool to the military industrialists for thirty pieces of silver. On second thought it was not thirty pieces of silver at all. Perhaps I slandered Judas by saying so, for in 1927 Shearer received $25,000 from these interests to break up the Geneva Arms Conference which threatened to reduce naval forces. And that, ladies and gentlemen, is not merely newspaper gossip but actual evidence wormed out of Shearer himself. Then having performed this patriotic service he came home and went down to Washington. To do what? I quote his own words: "to post the new commander" of the American Legion upon how he should use his influence among the World War veterans in order to promote the big navy gospel. And who was that commander of the American Legion? Ladies and gentlemen, it was Colonel Paul D. McNutt, dean of the Indiana University Indiana. Let me quote from Shearer's own testimony concerning his relations with him:

"I came down to Washington" said Shearer, "and I entered Commander McNutt's apartment and was with him until three in the morning, educating him; we will say, or posting him or whatever you wish. The next night Commander McNutt made a famous speech. I had given him all the data that I thought was necessary to carry on the policy of the American Legion."

"Ladies and gentlemen, I beg you to believe that I do not mean to criticize Colonel McNutt, but merely to point out how even so Don't miss this, The Greatest Football Story Ever Written, the romance of a gridiron star, playing under the Rockne system, who learned about football and love in the enthralling school of experience.

"Huddle!"

Francis Wallace knows the strategic value of the huddle in football—when delay may mean the difference between defeat and victory. He has written the greatest, most exciting football romance ever penned—and calls it Huddle!

FOOTBALL HERO FINDS GIRLS PUZZLING

Genius Revived

Those who knew Knute Rockne, late football coach of Notre Dame University, recognize him in the character of the coach in the great football story, Huddle. The story is built around the spectacular Rockne system of play and is as full of thrills as a real game.

Should a chart come with every girl?

Ted Wynne thought one should. Indeed he said as much to Rosalie Downs. He told her that he and Pidge, his room-mate at college, "couldn't figure women."

It was the first problem in Ted's life that he hadn't been able to solve — and most of them rather well. After two years in the steel mills where his father had spent his life, Ted had pulled out, against his father's objection and quite "on his own," and entered college to learn what he could — and to play football.

In everything else Ted had made good. At college he stood well with his fellows and the faculty, and especially well with Barney Mack, football coach, who had made the Blue Comets feared by every team, scheduled to play them.

But girls? The more he saw of them, the less he could figure them. Take Barb, for instance — his ideal and dream since his Bellport high school days. She was rich and aristocratic. He was poor, and of the steel mills. But at times she showed him such marked favor that he thought he had the lead over Tom Stone, one of Barb's own bunch, who for years had assumed an air of proprietorship toward Barb, just as if everything was settled except the date.

Ted could tell all this to his new friend Rosalie. He liked Rosalie immensely. He had no thought of falling in love with her, but he could confide in her. She was a wonderful pal. And it all got mixed up somehow with his football; which complicated matters. Both Ted and Tom were on the team — two of its outstanding stars destined to be rivals for the captaincy, and both with hopes of making the all-American. There never was a football team where love and football didn't get into the scrimmages, and with the Blue Comets it was just a little more so.

That's just a glimpse of one situation in the greatest football romance ever written, entitled "Huddle." The story is by Francis Wallace, who attended Notre Dame, knew Knute Rockne and football from the inside for eleven years, and whom Rockne endorsed as "better qualified to write football fiction" than any other contemporary.

Day of Reckoning

LAST winter while depression-hit Pennsylvania's taxpayers were clamoring for tax relief, the legislature waxed revenue hungry, instead of showing sympathy for the taxpayers, and passed a sales tax. As a result there will be many new faces and many troubled minds in the next general assembly. There was dynamite in that tax.

Created at a time of widespread unemployment and diminishing incomes and business demoralization, the tax met with general unpopularity. Thousands of merchants organized for its repeal. The consuming public protests. And politicians are compelled to apologize and promise.

When the time for settlement arrives there will be thousands of small merchants struggling to keep their heads above water, who have nothing with which to meet the levy. Keeping no books, they will have no way to determine their indebtedness to the state, and not having passed the tax on to their customers they will have to extract it from their own bare pockets.

Business has been unable in many cases to pass the tax on to its customers. Merchants who add the tax as a separate item in their statements are likely to receive the payment less the tax. Even the state has refused to pay the tax on its purchases although it has not exempted the dealer of the tax on sales to the state.

The sales tax looks like easy money and an easy way out of a dilemma to the legislator, who must choose between government economy, which means the loss of political jobs, and higher taxes. Where he has elected to take the latter course he found much political grief, for there is a limit even to the patience of a goaded taxpayer.

The Postal Blunder

THREE months of operation of the postal rate boosts effected by congress last spring gave the postoffice department and Congress something to work on in the direction of further changes and give the users of the mails something upon which to base an opinion as to the efficacy of the last rate increases as revenue raisers and deficit eradicators.

The new rates not only failed to produce the additional revenue expected and needed, but during their first 90 days of trial produced less revenue than the old rates brought in during the corresponding period of last year.

Both the advocates and opponents of the higher rates can cite these results to prove their respective cases. The postoffice contends that while the new rates were responsible for some loss in volume the drop in revenue reported for the last three months would have been several times greater had the old and lower rates been in effect.

But those who opposed the changes argue that there would have been an increase in volume and revenue had the old rates been retained, basing their contention on business gains made during the period.

It would seem that the postal authorities are not so sure of their ground, having already recommended to Congress that the old two-cent rate for first class mail be restored as early as possible.

Direct-by-mail advertising, one of the largest sources of postal revenue, was dealt almost a death blow by the three-cent stamp.

ASHVILLE

Edward Vause, a brother to Mrs. Edwin Swoyer of Gray Station, died recently at his home in Grand Rapids, Mich. He leaves a widow. He was well known in Ashville and Circleville, having spent his boyhood days in Harrison-twp, and went to school at the Ashbury School house.

Miss Altha Pierce is ill at her home on Scioto-st with sinus trouble. There are a great many school children of the eighth grade at home sick with colds.

Jerry Accard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Accard on East-st, has been quarantined for Scarlet Fever.

The Parent Teachers Association will hold its meeting at the school building on Thursday evening, Dec. 15.

Miss Florence Tegardin is still at Grant hospital. She underwent an operation two weeks ago.

DEER ATTACKS

BAILEY, Colo.—A large buck deer living in the mountains near Bailey recently attacked a group of five school children. He knocked two small girls down in the snow-covered road, before one girl drove him away.

HEART STRINGS

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

Without preliminary, she opened up as soon as the woman came in. "Myra, I was thinking about you this morning," she said. "And I think I know something you could do. One of the big dress houses that I know through Aunt Pam employs smart looking, cultured women to advertise them in a rather novel way, and I think I could get the place for you."

"What would I have to do?" asked Mrs. Brownley, faintly.

"Just live at one of the fashionable hotels, wear their models, and make a point of meeting wealthy American women, and telling them where you got your clothes. You would appear merely a guest of the hotel, idle and lonely. Nobody'd ever dream of your being a business woman. Your clothes would be designed to attract attention. Clothes are the first topic in Paris. You could tell them how much better you'd found this house. If they seemed interested you would say you knew the manager well, and would take them around and introduce them if they cared to go and that, even if they didn't care to buy, it would be fascinating to look. Of course the exclusive houses were rather wary of 'lookers', but you being a customer . . . and so on . . .

"You wouldn't have to urge. Or even go with them. Merely suggest, then change the subject. Before parting, offer your visiting card. That would bring out theirs. Then phone the house, giving the name of your customers. And whether they go with you or alone, you get ten per cent on everything they buy. One woman may buy thousands of dollars' worth."

"Oh," gasped Myra, "do you think I could?"

"Why not? There's nothing to do but live elaborately, make yourself sociable and friendly to your countrywomen. You could do that, couldn't you?"

"Yes, but—"

"What?"

"Oh, I couldn't. I just know I couldn't. I never have done anything like that. I'd feel like a sales person."

"I thought you said you wanted to do something to make some money."

"I do. But that's so degrading."

"Well, I wouldn't think it so. The offer was made to me, and if I weren't studying I'd grab it. And I've never worked for money either, and I don't think I'm a particularly coarse grained person. My family is rather well considered."

"Oh, I didn't mean that. But I just couldn't. It just isn't in me."

Patricia's temper was rising. "Just what is in you, Myra? You want money. You don't want to marry for it unless it's the right man, you don't want to work for it."

"Oh, but I do want to work if I could do something—artistic."

"You mean you'd like to pose as an artist and let a distant husband send you money, or a friend give it to you, or get it for you somehow."

Mrs. Brownley burst into tears. "I'm sorry, Myra," said Patricia in swift contrition. "I've a beastly temper sometimes—and I've been worrying over you." She rose. "I'll run out and get some tea. Don't go. Wait till I come back. Forgive me?"

"Of course you didn't mean to be unkind. I know that. Myra wiped her eyes and smiled. "Want me to go for you?"

"No, I'll go."

Patricia ran all the way to the grocery store. Terrible thoughts clamored inside her head. . . . All in a minute somebody she'd been worrying over, feeling sorry for, had collapsed. . . . But maybe . . . people have different viewpoints . . . seems so unreasonable. . . . But what if Jimmie had been imposed on by that woman! She thought of stories she had heard of clever gold diggers. . . . They must have a good story of some kind. . . . Surely men wouldn't just throw thousands at them unless . . . they must feel obligated in some way. Terribly obligated. Or afraid. Jimmie isn't afraid; but he must feel horribly obligated to a woman who would submit to the humiliation of being divorced by a rotter of a husband, and destitute herself into the bargain, because she "was afraid" of that sort of woman. She's got him all sewed up before he knows what's happened to him. Jimmie's about now so tight he's got to sew up her or she'll sue him for breach of promise or blackmail or something."

"I won't believe it! How can I have such thoughts about Myra? Poor thing, I have no patience with these helpless women, but—"

Mounting the steps to her studio, Patricia saw that her door was a little ajar. . . . Thought I closed it. . . . Then she heard sobbing. . . . Myra, talking and sobbing bitterly. . . .

Patricia pushed the door open. Jack stood near the desert scene. His back was to the door. Myra Brownley was sobbing on his breast. . . .

Mr. Braithwait inserted his key in the door. "I'm sorry, dear, I'm so late for dinner. I'm afraid you are—" He paused. "Why, child, what's the matter?"

Patricia was standing in the center of the big room which was in a state of unwonted dishevelment. Her hair was tousled. Her blue eyes glittered. He started toward her in mild alarm.

She backed away. "Don't come near me! Don't touch me. You think I'm your daughter. I'm not. I'm a terrible person. I've just done a terrible thing!"

He stood looking at her a moment, and his soft hazel eyes began twinkling. He was reminded of her as a child accusing herself of horrible sins. "What terrible thing have you been doing?" he asked.

"I've pouted a woman."

"You pouted a woman."

"I did it. In this very room. I pouted that terrible Mrs. Brownley who has got Jimmie all snarled up in her clutches, trying to make him marry her. I found her out. And I pouted her."

"You mean you gave her a tongue lashing?"

"I pouted her, I tell you. I caught her by the hair and put her on the floor. Then I sat on her and made her nose bleed on our beautiful rug." Her eyes fell to a freshly washed spot on the rug.

Mr. Braithwait studied the spot. "Don't you think Warren is big enough to do his own pouncing?" he asked mildly.

"No man is big enough to fight that sort of woman. She's got him all sewed up before he knows what's happened to him. Jimmie's about now so tight he's got to sew up her or she'll sue him for breach of promise or blackmail or something."

"A woman can't sue a man for breach of promise if he is married, and was married when he met her," said Mr. Braithwait quietly. "And she can't blackmail him if his wife knows all about the affair and is willing to forgive him."

"But Aunt Pam—"

"Has forgiven her husband everything. He is leaving London tomorrow morning to join her and they are going to spend a couple of weeks traveling on the Continent while their yacht is being brought over. Then they're going on a long cruise. He sat down in his easy chair. Patricia continued to stand.

"But when—"

"This afternoon. He called her on the long distance phone at about four o'clock. He began telling her he was the happiest man in the world when he received her telegram. He called himself a number of improper names, begged her to forgive him and a great deal more before she had a chance to speak a word. The curious thing was she hadn't sent him any telegram, but she was so happy over the evident blunder that she didn't tell him. I was visiting in her suite and heard her side of the conversation. She told me his side. They patched up the entire difficulty and arranged their plans over the phone. It seemed as if he couldn't let her go. They must have talked fully a half hour."

"He certainly got busy quick," mused Patricia. "I sent that telegram around one o'clock."

Headache Is A Symptom Of Disease

It Usually Indicates Trouble Elsewhere in the Body

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City.

ONE of man's most common complaints is headache. It is a distressing affliction which may be so severe as to incapacitate the sufferer.

Headache is not a disease. It is a symptom of some physical disorder.

Various things may cause headaches. The mistake that most persons make is that in their anxiety to remove the pain they disregard the cause.

Headache is often associated with constipation, indigestion, intestinal poisoning, diseases of the heart and blood vessels, sinus trouble, eye strain, anemia, high blood pressure, kidney disease, and certain disturbances of the nervous system. In elderly persons, particularly, headache can be traced to hardening of the arteries and chronic high blood pressure.

In children, headache may be the first sign of an infectious disease. It should never be ignored.

Defective vision or the wearing of improper glasses is a common cause of headache. Lack of fresh air; poor ventilation; escape of gas from gas jets, automobile exhausts and furnaces, are other causes that must not be overlooked.

Locate the Cause

If permanent relief is expected the cause must first be determined. This can be accomplished only by means of a complete physical examination. A careful study of the manner in which headache develops, the character of the pain and its location, are important.

If necessary, X-ray examination of teeth and sinuses should be made. Habits of diet and manner of living are carefully considered.

The cause of headache may be in some part of the body distant from the head. For this reason, I cannot say too much about the importance of a careful check-up of all the organs of the body. This includes the heart, lungs, digestive system, kidneys, nervous system, blood and blood vessels.

There is a distinct type of headache often confused with the ordinary headache. This form of headache is spoken of as "migraine."

Migraine is a headache that occurs at periodic intervals. The sufferer knows in advance when he is going to have an attack. A day or two previous to the onset, he suffers from vague, gastro-intestinal symptoms, eye disturbances or other signs familiar to him. Little is known about migraine except that it runs in families and is believed to be hereditary.

Avoid patent medicines and tablets guaranteed to cure headache. Remember that headache is a warning sign given by kindly nature. It is a danger signal. Heed it and protect your body from further damage.

Answers to Health Queries

A Daily Reader Q.—Please describe French mouth and state how long an attack may last.

TRACE NEW YORKER

NEW YORK—"New Yorkese," that pronunciation peculiar to native Manhattanites has been found by Dr. William Cabell Greer of Barnard College to be inherited from the early Irish poets. He says they must have been "the foist to use such words as thoihty-thold and New Joidsey."

FOR CLASSIFIED Readers a little money goes a long way.

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

The peculiar odor of boiling sap from rubber trees recently brought curious citizens in nearby districts to the high fence surrounding the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "back lot." Those who had the ambition to climb on boxes and peek over were startled to see a complete jungle rubber factory in operation.

This elaborate installation was made to provide authentic scenes for "Red Dust," a picture of life on rubber plantations near Cochín, China, which features Clark Gable and Jean Harlow. The production came today to the Cliftona Theatre. Large sealed containers full of the natural white sap from trees in the jungles of Africa and South American were brought to the set, just before the cameras were to operate, the milky substance was poured into large kettles.

Victor Fleming, well known for "The Wet Parade," directed "Red Dust" with a brilliant supporting cast including Gene Raymond, Mary Astor, Donald Crisp, Tully Marshall, Forrester Harvey and Willie Fung.

AT THE GRAND

With this whole nation talking politics, Columbia beats all the other motion picture companies to the starting line with "Washington Merry-Go-Round," a revealing and sincere picture that goes behind the scenes in the Capitol to show what really goes on. It opened at the Grand Theatre Sunday. This film is no trivial picturing of Washington buildings and monuments. It is, on the contrary, a tremendously thought provoking picture which should be seen by every man, woman and child in the country. This is a true expose, a forcible presentation of inside doings in the Capital showing things which the average voter seldom realizes.

The picture was directed by James Cruze and he has brought to his task much of the lofty patriotic fervor which characterized those splendid pictures of "The Covered Wagon" and "Old Ironsides."

"Washington Merry-Go-Round" is a sure enough lowdown on the higher-ups in Washington. It is a picture that dares to blast the lid off the national capitol. Ruthless, frank, fearlessly honest. You'll thrill to the patriotic young Congressmen's single-handed fight against gang politics and gang politicians. Here's a story with the explosive force of a bombshell. It pulls no punches, shows no favor. And through it all weaves the delightfully natural romance of a young girl who tries to reform a political tartar.

PHONES PET DOG EVERY SATURDAY

Distance does not thwart W. E. Snyder, catering manager of a Cincinnati hotel, in carrying on a friendly chat every week with his pet dog, "Buttons."

Each Saturday Mr. Snyder telephones from Cincinnati to the caretaker of his poultry ranch at Danville, Ind., and "Buttons," a toy Boston bull, is placed at the receiver. She scratches at the mouthpiece, whines and "speaks" in response to her master's voice.

Long, Short of It

Telephone connections have ranged in length from 36 inches to 21,000 miles.

The longest connection ever made was a transoceanic call between Los Angeles, Cal., and Sidney, Australia, and the shortest was between the talking picture stars, Buddy Rogers and Peggy Shannon, who were separated by only a sound proof wall.

Baling hay on exceptionally dry days results in shattering the leaves. This practice frequently lowers the grade, or at least results in bales that appear on external inspection to contain stemmy hay.

Germany's Soldier-Chancellor Has Long Ruled From Behind

General Kurt von Schleicher Dictated Policies of Last Two Ministries. Also Controls Police and Entire Army.

Although the appointment of General Kurt von Schleicher as Chancellor of Germany by President Paul von Hindenburg is hailed by the press and public as a change, it is well known that the only real change is the emergence of von Schleicher from behind the scenes to accept responsibility for the policies which he has dictated to the last two ministries. For years the nominal rulers of the country have known that the real power lay with the man who sat behind the desk in the Reichswehr Ministry, and any time during the last decade von Schleicher could have been Chancellor, but he didn't want the job. On one occasion he is said to have remarked, "If I were Chancellor I would need only one assistant—a hangman." As it is now, he is confining himself to two assistants. They are Franz Bracht, Commissioner of Prussia and Minister of the Interior, and Dr. Guenther Gereke, Minister of Labor. Von Schleicher is retaining the post of Minister of Defense, which places him in the almost invulnerable position of being in control of the army and police, as well as the political machinery of the country. It is predicted that von Schleicher will wage a ruthless war on Adolf Hitler, Fascist firebrand, despite their friendship, if the Blackshirt chief persists in attacking the government, but it is believed that Hitler will come into line and co-operate with the new regime. Von Schleicher has an ambitious program planned for relief of unemployment and the restoration of prosperity. This program has won him the support of the press and resulted in the first favorable reaction in many months on the Berlin stock exchange.

MUSICAL TEA IS DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

Mrs. Leon Van Vleet entertained her musical tea Sunday afternoon at her home on W. High-st.

The affair was a delightful one. Eleanor Drehsbach outlined briefly the subjects studied by the class during the year. She stated:

"Although we do not know just how old music is, we may safely say it is at least 9000 years old. There are pictures carved in stone by people who lived about 9000 years ago. Some of these pictures are of people playing musical instruments."

"To the best of our knowledge the first musical scales were used by the Greeks. However, they were crude and did not much resemble our present scales. The Greeks played various musical instruments, their favorite being a stringed instrument called the lyre."

"Music was first written by using letters of the alphabet. The staff was first used in about the 11th century, and the first good system of marking time came in the 12th or 13th century, but not until the 16th and 17th centuries did music make any great advancement."

"In the last two centuries our great composers developed methods of expressing in their music all the emotions of human life, such as joy, love, sadness, loneliness, etc. They also picture sunshine, babbling brooklets, falling leaves, and crispy snow scenes. In fact, anything that can be written in a story is written in music. If we know the stories of some of our pieces we would see more beauty in their melodies."

"We have learned in the study of musical history that some of our greatest composers attained their musical education under most adverse conditions. Some of them walking many miles to their lessons, and others performing in the streets in order to earn their way."

"The Harpsichord, great grandfather of the piano, was first made in 1590, to be followed by the first piano over 100 years later. In the 200 or more years since, the piano has become the most popular of all musical instruments."

The remainder of the program consisted of piano numbers by noted composers of whom the class has studied. Jean Theobald rendered "To a Wild Rose" by MacDowell as the opening number and Wanda Barnhart concluded with "Grand Valse De Concert" by Matti.

A two piano number was played with Mrs. VanVleet by Mary Katherine Baker, Martha Belle Ferguson and Eleanor Drehsbach.

Several duets were played with Mrs. VanVleet by Lucille May, Doris Howell and Eyer Drehsbach. Wanda Barnhart and June West entertained with a duet, and other selections were solos rendered by Eleanor McAbee, June West, Doris Leist, Eyer Drehsbach, Eleanor Stout, Wanda Seymour, Ethyl May, Helen Hill, Betty Weiler, Mary Katherine Baker, Eleanor Drehsbach and Martha Belle Ferguson.

Three new members, Marvane Wallace, Loretta Wing and Junior Mowery were taken into the class.

Milady's Legs An Index To Her Temperament

Emotions of Fair Sex Revealed by Her Stance. Beware the Woman with One Foot Off the Ground—She's a Fire-Eater.

That the lovely legs of my lady faire have the power of expressing emotions as well, if not better, than her eyes, which are generally credited with having "it," is the contention of Frank Borzage, director of the film version of Ernest Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms." Proving his point, the director uses a girl in the movie, whose face does not appear once upon the screen, all her emotions being conveyed by different motions and stances of her lovely legs. The girl is Miss Alice Adair, 21-year-old extra, who won the role in competition with 2,500 girls from all over the country. Miss Adair's underpinnings are the last word in expression, and here is the way she, or rather her talented legs, react to certain emotions. Anger is depicted by keeping the ball of one foot off the ground; poise is portrayed by letting the weight of the body rest on one foot, while the other, knee bent, remains gracefully at ease; shyness, rare in these days, is simulated by the winding of one foot around the calf of the other leg; embarrassment, by pressing one foot with the ball of the other; covetousness, by placing the toe of one slipper under the arch of the other. This might be called the "gold digger" stance. But the greatest of all emotions, according to poets, love, is depicted by a graceful rising upon the toes. Girls who like to be kissed always adopt this position, a kind of on-her-mark-for-the-alter position. The defiant girl, who mocks convention, stretches her feet right out when seated, and the lady with unbounded self-confidence crosses her knees. That's the language of legs. But if there are any complications, don't blame us, blame Hollywood.

police surgeon after an emergency squad had worked on him with inhalators for an hour and a quarter and after physicians had injected strychnine in a futile attempt to revive him.

Davis left Colorado after telling friends here and in Denver that he was going to Washington. To seek aid from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for his association. After he disappeared a check of the company's deposit boxes revealed a shortage of $1,000,000. Davis was charged with embezzlement.

More than 7,000 investors suffered losses in the collapse of the City Savings association. Chief Harper offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest of Davis. This was augmented by an offer of $100 by a detective magazine.

Since Davis' disappearance reports from all parts of the United States and Europe reached Colorado Springs concerning his supposed movements.

Police revealed that Davis' 22-year old daughter, Dorothy, was being guarded, following threats to kidnap her in order to force Davis to return.

SUSPECT HELD IN MUSICIAN'S DEATH

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—The first arrest was made today, 36 hours after the crime, in the mysterious murder of handsome Edwin O. Schildhauer, 28, high school bandmaster.

Paul Farmer, 40, was the man taken into custody. He roomed in the flat above the Schildhauers with George Birkinshaw, blind father of Mrs. Frances Schildhauer, the widow.

Police refused to divulge Farmer's possible connection with the abduction and slaying of the musician.

Meantime, authorities continued to question Mrs. Schildhauer in the hope of turning up some clues in her husband's career.

Some of these pictures are of people playing musical instruments."

"To the best of our knowledge the first musical scales were used by the Greeks. However, they were crude and did not much resemble our present scales. The Greeks played various musical instruments, their favorite being a stringed instrument called the lyre."

"Music was first written by using letters of the alphabet. The staff was first used in about the 11th century, and the first good system of marking time came in the 12th or 13th century, but not until the 16th and 17th centuries did music make any great advancement."

"In the last two centuries our great composers developed methods of expressing in their music, all the emotions of human life, such as joy, love, sadness, loneliness, etc. They also picture sunshine, babbling brooklets, falling leaves, and crisp snow scenes. In fact, anything that can be written in story is written in music. If we know the stories of some of our pieces we would see more beauty in their melodies."

"We have learned in the study of musical history that some of our greatest composers attained their musical education under most adverse conditions. Some of them walking many miles for their lessons, and others performing tasks of drudgery in order to earn their way."

"The Harpsichord, great grandfather of the piano, was first made in 1590, to be followed by the first piano over 100 years later. In the 200 or more years since, the piano has become the most popular of all musical instruments."

The remainder of the program consisted of piano numbers by noted composers of whom the class has studied. Jean Theobald rendered "To a Whirl Rose" by MacDowell as the opening number and Wanda Barnhart concluded with "Grand Valse De Concert" by Matti.

A two piano number was played with Mrs. VanVliet by Mary Katherine Baker, Martha Belle Ferguson and Eleanor Dreisbach.

Several duets were played with Mrs. VanVliet by Lucille May, Doris Howell and Eyer Dreisbach, Wanda Barnhart and June West entertained with a duet, and other selections were solos rendered by Eleanor McAbee, June West, Doris Leist, Eyer Dreisbach, Eleanor Stout, Wanda Seymour, Ethyl May, Helen Hill, Betty Weiler, Mary Katherine Baker, Eleanor Dreisbach and Martha Belle Ferguson.

Three new members, Marvene Wallace, Loretta Wing and Junior Mowery were taken into the class.

Milady's Legs An Index To Her Temperament

Emotions of Fair Sex Revealed by Her Stance. Beware the Woman with One Foot Off the Ground—She's a Fire-Eater.

The lovely legs of my lady faire have the power of expressing emotions as well, if not better, than her eyes, which are generally credited with having "it," is the contention of Frank Borzage, director of the film version of Ernest Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms." Proving his point, the director uses a girl in the movie, whose face does not appear once upon the screen, all her emotions being conveyed by different motions and stances of her lovely legs. The girl is Miss Alice Adair, 21-year-old extra, who won the role in competition with 2,500 girls from all over the country. Miss Adair's underpinnings are the last word in expressiveness, and here is the way she, or rather her talented legs, react to certain emotions. Anger is depicted by keeping the ball of one foot off the ground; poise is portrayed by letting the weight of the body rest on one foot, while the other, knee bent, remains gracefully at ease; shyness, rare in these days, is simulated by the winding of one foot around the calf of the other leg; embarrassment, by pressing one foot with the ball of the other; jealousy, by placing the toe of one slipper under the arch of the other. This might be called the "gold digger" stance. But the greatest of all emotions, according to poets, love, is depicted by a graceful rising upon the toes. Girls who like to be kissed always adopt this position, a kind of on-her-mark-for-the-altar position. The defiant girl, who mocks convention, stretches her feet right out when seated, and the lady with unbounded self-confidence crosses her knees. That's the language of legs. But if there are any complications, don't blame us, blame Hollywood.

EMBEZZLER

police surgeon after an emergency squad had worked on him with inhalators for an hour and a quarter and after physicians had injected strychnine in a futile attempt to revive him.

Davis left Colorado after telling friends here and in Denver that he was going to Washington, to seek aid from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for his association. After he disappeared a check of the company's deposit boxes revealed a shortage of $1,000,000. Davis was charged with embezzlement.

More than 7,000 investors suffered losses in the collapse of the City Savings association. Chief Harper offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest of Davis. This was augmented by an offer of $100 by a detective magazine.

Since Davis' disappearance reports from all parts of the United States and Europe reached Colorado Springs concerning his supposed movements.

Police revealed that Davis' 22-year old daughter, Dorothy, was being guarded, following threats to kidnap her in order to force Davis to return.

AMY GOES HOME

MOSSAMEDES, Portuguese West Africa, Dec. 12.—After five hours rest, Amy Johnson Mollison, attempting a record-breaking return flight from Cape Town to England, forced ahead today toward Duala, French Cameroon, 1,300 miles away.

A dispatch received here said she had hopped off from Benguela for Duala at 4:30 a. m., after being delayed by fog.

When she arrived here she was well ahead of her schedule. The aviator smashed the London to Cape Town record last month in four days, six hours and 56 minutes. The former record was held by her husband, Capt. James A. Mollison.

SUSPECT HELD IN MUSICIAN'S DEATH

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—The first arrest was made today, 36 hours after the crime, in the mysterious murder of handsome Edwin O. Schildhauer, 28, high school bandmaster.

Paul Farmer, 40, was the man taken into custody. He roomed in the flat above the Schildhauers with George Birkinshaw, blind father of Mrs. Frances Schildhauer, the widow.

Police refused to divulge Farmer's possible connection with the abduction and slaying of the musician.

Meantime, authorities continued to question Mrs. Schildhauer in the hope of turning up some clues in her husband's career.

UPSHAW TO TALK

COLUMBUS, Dec. 12.—William D. Upshaw, defeated Prohibition party candidate for president, will lead the way in campaigns for a temperance come-back in the 1934 election at a prohibition rally to be held here tomorrow.
